Mrs. Taylor, of Florida, recently ran up unexpectedly against a 250 pound bear, but instead of apologizing, she grapped a club and laid the bear out. Ever since then Mr. Taylor never remains out later than 10 o'clock p. m.

Some of the Kentucky gold organs are accusing Hardin, Democratic candidate for Governor, of "bad faith." Bad fiddlesticks. They knew just where Hardin stood when they nominated him, and he stands now just where he stood then.

The Savannah News remarks that "Campbell's success in Ohio in the forthcoming election would probably direct public attention to another piece of Presidential timber." In that event very likely, but as there is not the slightest likelihood of that event, public attention will hardly be called in that direction.

A Brooklyn policeman who studied anatomy for four days so that he could shoot himself artistically and get out of that town, proved such a dull scholar that the doctors found no difficulty in pulling the bullet out. But with the Brooklyn trolley why should this man have wasted four days reading up on anatomy?

A Michigan Justice of the Peace, who judicially suggested the Solomon plan of settling the proprietorship of a dog which was in dispute, didn't meet with a signal success. One of the claimants agreed to dividing the dog and taking half, but the other fellow not only objected but lit into 'Squire, knocked him dizzy and walked off with all of the dog.

VOL. LVI.—NO. 130. WILMINGTON, N. C., TUESDAY, AUGUST 27, 1895. WHOLE NO. 8,837

THE MORNING STAR, THE OLDEST DAILY NEWSPAPER IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The Only Six-Dollar Daily of its Class in the State.

Mr. Gomez, of Cuba, or somebody else is doing a great deal of lying about his case. The Spaniards had him killed in battle twice, and finally carried him off with a case of consumption But two days after he had died of consumption, a friend in Philadelphia received a letter from him stating that he never felt better in his life. Now if he is really dead, what is the use of his repeatedly bobbing up and denying it?

In no State Democratic Convention yet held have the advocates of the single gold standard dared make a fight on that issue. President Cleveland favors the single gold standard, Secretary Carlisle favors it, Secretary Hoke Smith favors it, Secretary Morton favors it. Yet we find none of their followers bold enough to propose anything stronger than the old financial straddle of 1892. This is significant.

Senator Frye, of Maine, rises to remark that he "would as soon be governed by negroes as by the Irish." This simply shows that some men are not very particular, but as there is not the most distant probability of his being governed by either while he continues to domicile in Maine the particular occasion for this remark is not apparent.

The American locomotive is forging to the front in Japan. Col. Cockerill, correspondent of the New York Herald, says the Baldwin Works, at Philadelphia, have sold seventy-three in that country, and these have demonstrated their superiority over locomotives from other countries, especially in climbing high grades

Some of the Northern papers are still protesting against sending the Liberty bell to Atlanta. But why, if an imitation bull fight would fill the bill as a drawer, shouldn't an imitation Liberty bell do as well? A good imitation would be quite as inspiring, and would draw about as well.

A bank in Tacoma failed with liabilities of $379,000 and assets of $444 in silver. The people out there are not marvelling so much over the failure as to how those $444 were overlooked and left behind.

A record of 540 miles in 538 minutes, recently made between London and Aberdeen, isn't bad for a run of that distance. But it doesn't come up to some of the runs made on some of our roads.

The London Chronicle announces that the Ameer of Afghanistan is on his ear on account of a fancied snub by the Queen to his son, who is now in England, but considers it a mere freak.

As old man Mora is 87 years old and has encountered many vicissitudes, it is not surprising that he relinquished the interest on his claim against Spain to get the principal.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY.

What Is Thought of the New Plan and Its Results to Wilmington.

Referring to the article in the STAR concerning the Standard Oil Company, the Charlotte News says:

"The Standard Oil Company, so the STAR says, is to make Wilmington its distributing point for the Carolinas and Georgia. This will mean the building there of large storage houses and a barrel factory, and an immense increase in the freight traffic of all the roads of that city. The port of Wilmington offers peculiar advantages for the character of business the Standard proposes to establish there. The harbor is deep and spacious, the water front ample and convenient and the railroad facilities are just right. It is a good stroke of business for that town, and its people should feel very much encouraged thereby."

A Bad Accident.

Lloyd Russell, a negro boy 15 years old, was seriously injured yesterday. He was on one of the city carts, driven by Moseley Pearsall, colored, and at Thirteenth and Princess streets, where the load of trash was to be dumped, stood on one of the shafts. When the cart-body was tipped the horse made a dash and Russell was thrown off, striking on his head. Pearsall carried the boy in an unconscious condition to the Atlantic engine house, where Dr. Russell, city physician, attended him. The boy has since been unconscious and it is feared he was fatally injured.

Bicycle Trip from Carolina Beach to Ocean View.

Mr. P. Heinsberger, Jr., and Mr. A. J. Flanner, members of the Bicycle Club, Sunday afternoon last had a very pleasant ride on their wheels over a new route. They rode from Carolina Beach, starting at 4.80 p. m., to Ocean View, arriving at 6 p. m., making the entire trip along the coast in one hour and thirty minutes, and against the wind. They were transferred over Masonboro Inlet in a row boat. On arriving at Ocean view they boarded the train for Wilmington.

One Cent a Word.

Hereafter advertisements to go in our "Business Locals" department will be charged one cent per word for each insertion; but no advertisement, however short, will be taken for less than 20 cents.

This is a reduction from former rates and it is also a convenience to advertisers, who can calculate the exact cost of their advertisements, which must be paid for always in advance.

HABEAS CORPUS CASE.

J. W. Meacham's Application for Reduction of Bond—The Bond Reduced to $500—Mr. A. J. Marshall Becomes His Surety.

As had been agreed upon by his Honor, Judge O. P. Meares, Mr. J. W. Meacham's case was set for a hearing at 12 o'clock noon yesterday At the appointed time Judge Meares appeared. Deputy Sheriff King cried "Silence in Court." A few moments afterwards Mr. Meacham was ushered into the court room, accompanied by his attorney, Mr. A. J. Marshall. There were very few spectators present, the majority of them being newspaper men. This was due to the fact that the newspapers were the only ones notified at what hour the hearing would take place.

Mr. Marshall arose and asked the court to wait a few minutes for Mr. Marsden Bellamy, the counsel for the prosecution, which was granted. Mr. Bellamy arrived a few minutes afterwards, whereupon the Judge began the hearing, as follows:

Mr. Marshall argued that the bond should be reduced because Meacham was a poor man; that he was only an employe of the Dispatch Publishing Company, at a stated salary, and that everything he wrote was under the supervision and direction of the owners of the paper. For this reason, he urged, they were the really responsible parties, and Meacham should be released on giving a bond much smaller in amount than the one required of him on the preliminary examination.

Mr. Marsden Bellamy, representing the prosecution, stated that he would interpose no objection to a reduction of the bail. He was entirely willing that it should be fixed at a reasonable sum.

The argument of counsel occupied but a few minutes, and at its close the Court announced that the bond would be reduced one-half, or from $1,000 to $500,

Mr. Meacham was at once taken back to the jail, while his attorney saw some heretofore intimate friends to try and secure bondsmen. At about 8 o'clock last night his attorney, finding that he could not secure it, justified in the amount himself, and Mr. Meacham, who has been incarcerated since Friday last, was released from custody.

CAPSIZED ON A REEF.

A Boating Party from Masonboro in a Bad Predicament.

Sunday afternoon a party of young men—Messrs. George and Henry Peschau, Morgan Turrentine, R. J. Price, C. H. Robinson, Jr., and Lonnie Southerland—attempted to sail from Masonboro Inlet to Wrightsville Inlet, but their boat struck on a reef and capsized near Wrightsville beach, throwing them into the water, which, fortunately, was only about three feet in depth. They were seen by persons on the beach, and a call was made for a boat with which to go to their assistance, but no boat could be found. Mr. Harry Latham got a line and with the assistance of Mr. J. D. Skelding swam with it out to the reef, when the boat was righted, the line made fast and the party were hauled ashore.

In the meantime, Capt. Oscar Grant, Superintendent of the Seacoast Road, took the engine and a car and ran over to Wrightsville, where he got a boat with a colored crew and in a short time had it in the water, but not in time to be of assistance. The crew of this boat were so prompt and worked so energetically to go to the aid of the young men, that a collection amounting to $11.25 was taken up for their benefit.

Severely Injured.

Mr. E. D. J. Furlong, of this city, who has been employed for some time as distiller at the Imperial Pine Product Company's Works, near Smith's creek, just outside the limits of the city, was severely injured about 4.80 o'clock Sunday afternoon, while tightening the manhole plate, a part of the machiney above the boiler. He was on top of the boiler at work when one of the joints of the manhole plate blew out, knocking him from the boiler to the ground and severely scalding him on the back and breaking his right arm in two places, at the wrist and between that point and the forearm. He went at once to the street car depot at Hilton and rode to the junction of the line at Front and Princess streets, where he met Dr. Burbank, who took him into Mr. J. C. Mund's drug store, and after cutting the clothes from the injured parts, dressed the wounds. The burns were severe and the arm badly broken and the flesh mangled. Mr. Furlong was then carried to his home at 218 Church street, where he was resting easy last night.

Odd Fellows' Orphans.

The I. O. O. F. orphans of Goldsboro arrived here yesterday morning at 10 o'clock over the W. & W. R. R., under the care of Superintendent J. H. Deans, Mrs. E. W. Moore, Miss Luzelia Deans and Miss Carrie Moore. They were met by a committee from the four lodges of the city.

Miss Jennie Dudley presented each of the orphans with a badge, on which was: "I. O. O. F. Our Children. Ocean View and Southport, August 27th and 28th, 1895." The Seacoast train was in waiting at the depot, where the little ones embarked for Ocean View and where they spent the day and night, as the guests of Mrs. Davis, at Ocean View Hotel. They will come up to the city this morning, and on the steamer Wilmington will go to Southport, where they will spend the day as the guests of Atlantic Lodge 48 of that place; Returning to the city in the afternoon, they will be entertained by members of the four lodges of the city, and will leave to-morrow afternoon.

Housekeepers who want servants are in the habit of supplying their needs from the STAR'S want column. Are you looking for a situation? The STAR'S want column will bring you the best results. One cent a word. But no ad. taken for less than 20 cents. tf

THE BICYCLE CONTEST.

Charlotte Too Much for Wilmington—But the Boys Are Not Crying Over Their Defeat—Cordially Received and Hospitably Entertained.

[Star Correspondence.]

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 26.

EDITOR STAR:—Saturday night when we arrived we were met at the depot and escorted to our hotel by a large delegation of wheelmen, headed by Mr. J. E. Carson, the genial and clever secretary of the Charlotte Club. A number of ladies were present to extend a welcome to our team, and several were mounted on tandems.

Every arrangement had been made for our comfort, and too much cannot be said in praise of the thoughtful and efficient management of the Committee of Arrangements. The boys of the "Queen City" are certainly a clever set of fellows, and we hope to reciprocate their hospitality at an early date. Through the courtesy of Mr. Carson and others the privileges of the North State Club were extended to us during our stay.

Sunday morning the team attended service at the First Presbyterian Church.

Our boys were somewhat dismayed when they first tried the track, but they soon got on to its curves, and if they can only work their legs fast enough will beat Charlotte this afternoon. It is a quarter of a mile course and the curves are very sharp. The recent rains have not improved its condition, but it is in fairly good order.

The races will take place at 4.00 this afternoon. "Trilby" Turrentine and Sam Springer will open the ball by going the first heat of the quarter-mile race against McMackin, champion of North Carolina, and Harry Shaw, one of the speediest riders on the team.

The judges, selected are Messrs. Heiser, Myers and Rawlings.

[Special Star Telegram.]

CHARLOTTE, August 26,—The races occurred at 4.30 o'clock this evening. There were three events, each of which was hotly contested. The Charlotte boys did not run away with us by any means; but their track work and experience were too much for us. The races were divided into heats and decided by points. The races resulted as follows:

Quarter mile, first heat, McMackin, 1st; Rankin, 2d; Carson, J. C., 3d, and Springer 4th. Time, 36 seconds. In this heat Rankin made a most beautiful spurt, passing Carson and Springer and finishing about two feet behind McMackin's front wheel. Quarter mile, second heat—Carson, J. S., 1st; Sawyer, 2d; Sadler, 3d; Bunting, 4th. Time, 36 seconds. Bunting lost his pedal in this heat when he was well ahead of Sadler. Quarter mile, second heat—Ward, 1st; Turrentine, 2d. Time, 35 seconds. This was probably the most exciting race of the evening. Neither fell behind two feet during the quarter. Ward gained his advantage on the start.

One mile, first heat—McMackin, 1st; Sadler, 2d; Rankin, 3d; Carson, J. E., 4th; Springer, 5th; Wright, 6th. Time, 2:57. One mile, second heat—Turrentine, 1st; Ward, 2d; Carson, J. S., 3d; Sawyer, 4th. Time, 3:03. Sawyer claimed third in this but was overruled.

Three miles, first heat—McMackin, first; Sadler 2d; Rankin, 3d; Carson, J. E., 4th; Springer, 5th; Wright, 6th. Time, 9:32. Three miles, second heat—Carson, J. S., 1st; Sawyer, 2d; Turrentine, 3d; Sanders, 4th. Time, 8:42.

After the races Messrs. McMackin and Temple did a fast quarter in 32 3-5 seconds; McMackin winning. Temple also gave an exhibition of trick riding.

Many of the ladies wore Wilmington colors. The last seen of Trilby, Jr., he was riding on a tandem with a girl in front. The boys are so much pleased with the warm hospitality of the Charlotte people that they will not return until Wednesday. In the mile race, Turrentine and Bunting drew lots to determine which should ride; Turrentine winning. R.

BASE BALL AT CHARLOTTE.

The Blackstockings Lose Again—Score Ten to Seven.

It is but fair to say that the Wilmington base ball "rooters" were disappointed at the result of the game between the "Quicksteps" at Charlotte yesterday. After the very close game of Saturday, it was generally believed here that Schenck would rally his team today and place them ahead.

But there is no abatement of the interest in the three games to be played here this week between the same clubs. Nor has the confidence of the local "sports" in the ability of the "Blackstockings" to win two of the three games on the home grounds been shaken. The fact is, the Wilmington "rooters" not only expect those five double-eagles to remain right here, but they expect to give the friends of the "Quicksteps" a great many chances to win "coin of the realm" or human cash in any other shape they desire.

The result of the game yesterday was 10 to 7 in favor of the "Quicksteps."

Death of Mrs. Lila Davis Justice.

Mrs. Lila Davis Justice, wife of Mr. E. J. Justice, of Marion, N. C., and eldest daughter of Mr. DuBrutz Cutlar, of this city, died last Sunday after a brief illness. Besides her husband she leaves three little girls, the eldest only three years of age. Mr. Cutlar, her father, and members of his family were with her at the time of her death, having gone to Marion to spend the Summer. The funeral took place in Marion yesterday.

THE RIVAL FIGHTERS.

THE GREAT BATTLE BEWEEN FITZSIMMONS AND CORBETT.

The Fight of the Century—The Terrible Right Hand—The Hitting Muscles—The Neck the Most Vulnerable Part of the Prize Fighter.

[Augusta Chronicle]

For the next two months Presidential aspirants, the doings of Kings and Queens, panics and wars, the ups and downs of commerce and other ordinarily interesting news events, will be overshadowed by the modern gladiators, Mr. Corbett and Mr. Fitzsimmons. Should either of these gentlemen run a splinter into his left thumb the news would be flashed to all quarters of the civilized globe. Should Mr. Corbett consume three mutton chops and half a glass of mixed ale for dinner, instead of two mutton chops and a whole glass of mixed ale, his press agent will flaunt the stupendous fact in the face of the anxious world. If Mr. Corbett punches the bag one hundred and sixty-eight times a minute to Mr. Fitzsimmons' one hundred and sixty-four punches in the same space of time, mathematicians will be on hand to show that it will just take Mr. Corbett thirteen rounds two and one eighth minutes to put Mr. Fitzsimmons to sleep.

But should Mr. Fitzsimmons invent a new right hand stomach blow the supporters of Mr. Corbett will become panic-stricken until it is announced that Mr. Corbett has just created a wonderful left-hand upper cut, which will lift Mr. Fitzsimmons into the land of losers.

This is one way of looking at the coming fight at Dallas, Texas, on October 31st, which is to decide the ownership of $61,000, to say nothing of the title of champion, which is worth another $60,000 a year or more.

THE FIGHT OF THE CENTURY.

One thing is certain, that it will be the fight of the century, both men being exponents of the new school of pugilism in which science is everything. Both men are crafty, evenly matched physically, and are after the almighty dollar with a zest and energy which promises a bitter contest. Besides, they hate each other. When Mr. Corbett spat in the face of Mr. Fitzsimmons in a Philadelphia cafe a short time ago he did it for a purpose. He wanted to provoke Fitzsimmons into doing something which will cause the Corbett hate to rise up in all its strength.

Few people know it, but it is part of Corbett's creed not to fight a man until he has made of him a personal enemy. Corbett says when he goes into the ring he wants to be "dead sore" on the man against him. Dozens of fights have been lost by men who have allowed their sympathies to interfere at the critical time. No one has yet accused Corbett of being sympathetic, or of showing mercy to an opponent when money was at stake. Poor old Sullivan and Charlie Mitchell could feelingly testify to this.

But the calm and deliberate Fitzsimmons is not looking for sympathy at any stage of the game. "All I want," says he, "is an even run for my money, and if I can't thump his pompadour head off I'll take my medicine all right."

THE TERRIBLE RIGHT.

Each man counts on putting the other man out by a right hand swing on the point of the jaw. As such a blow will be worth a great fortune to the man who lands it, it is a matter of interest to inspect these right hands. If anything, Fitzsimmon's right is a better one than Corbett's. In the first place it is larger, the circumference being nine and one-half inches, measured around the palm inside the thumb, while Corbett's measures but eight inches.

Fitzsimmons is as careful about his hands as a society belle, but in an entirely different way. While she endeavors to keep them soft and small Fitz works to make his hard and large. The fact that he labored many years in a blacksmith shop in Australia accounts for the great strength and hardness of his hands. The individual fingers on Fitz's hands are thicker and stronger looking than Corbett's and all the tiny muscles and cords seem better developed.

THE NEED OF STRONG HANDS.

Corbett never had the advantage of a muscle-making trade to follow. The strength of his hands has been largely cultivated. He exercises daily on a wrist machine, which also strengthens the hand. Close attention is paid to this work. The need of hands which can stand a terrific strain without weakening any of the numerous small bones is a fundamental requirement of the fighter. In a long-drawn out battle the best man has more than once been deprived of victory by weak hands, particularly when pitted against a "glutton for punishment." The incessant smashing of the hand against the face and body of a well-trained fighter forces the lower knuckles into the back of the hand and breaks many of the small bones. Such an accident takes the heart out of the best fighter, and no matter how great his courage he cannot put the same steam into a blow when he knows that when his hand lands it is going to cause him the most acute agony.

The new fighter also takes particular pains with his feet. The man who has developed all the small muscles of the toes has an advantage over the man whose toes have never been cultivated. The man with the muscular toes and bunches of muscles sticking out on the side of the foot has more agility, can spring back and forth with the speed of a tiger and moreover can use his toes to extend his reach, a most important factor. Skipping the rope is one way of developing strength in the feet but Corbett's handball is better.

Fitzsimmons in an amusing article on what the fighter of the future would be, recently expressed the belief that all the toes might eventually become a solid mass of muscle and bone and he also thought that by cultivation the numerous small bones of the back of the hand might be welded into one large bone which could successfully withstand the most severe strain. The legs of the future fighter he says will be as thin as those of a thorough-bred horse, the forehead will be large and bulging, the jaw will be like iron, the arms will reach to the knees and all the weight will be above the waist.

THE HITTING MUSCLES.

The hitting muscles are those on the side of the back close to the arm-pits and those running from the neck to the top of the shoulder. Corbett's back muscles are longer and cleaner than Fitzsimmons's, but the latter is better off in the top shoulder muscles. The average strong man would look with disdain upon the muscular development of either Corbett or Fitzsimmons. He would find no great bunches of muscles on any part of their respective anatomy. Both of these men avoid tightening their muscles, or accumulating too much of them, in the fear of interfering with their speed. If either one were hampered by great bunches of muscles he would fall an easy victim to the other. A body with every muscle and cord, down to the smallest and most minute, evenly developed, is what are the most serviceable kind. If they are made too hard the man becomes muscle-bound and in first-class company he is sure to be whipped.

The neck is the most vulnerable part of the prize fighter and both Fitz and Corbett are devoting considerable attention to building up the muscles on the side to protect the delicate cords and bones from assault. An examination of all clever prize fighters will show that the neck from the ear to the shoulder is almost in straight line while the neck of the average man curves inward at the point. It is the constant development which gives the straight line. Both Fitz and Corbett would consider it a great acquisition in their necks bulged outward between the ear and shoulder. Then they would be almost invulnerable at this point.

THE CAROLINA MUTUAL

Fire Insurance Company,

of Charlotte, N. C.

The CAROLINA MUTUAL is a strong NORTH CAROLINA Company. It is, however, a stock company, and issues absolutely non-participating and non-assessable policies. Its mutual feature consists in a charter provision, that one-third of its directors must be POLICY-HOLDERS who are NOT stockholders elected by the POLICY-HOLDERS; this is a very strong point, the policy-holders who have great interests at stake, have a share in the management of the Company, and will always know its condition. Better than this, the CAROLINA MUTUAL deposits all premiums received at this agency to their credit with the WILMINGTON SAVINGS AND TRUST COMPANY. This makes it practically a local company. The directors of the company are:

P. M. BROWN,
Of Brown, Weddington & Co., Wholesale Hardware.
E. B. SPRINGS,
Of E. B. Springs & Co., Fertilizers and Wagons.
M. P. PEGRAM,
Cash'r First Nat'l Bank of Charlotte.
B. D. HEATH,
Of Heath Brothers, Bankers.
SAM'L E. WHITE,
President Fort Mill Man'f'g Co.
A. C. SUMMERVILLE,
Lumber and Real Estate.
J. T. ANTHONY,
Wholesale Provisions and Grain.
JOHN W. MILLER,
Real Estate and Cotton Broker.
HERIOT CLARKSON,
Of Clarkson & Duls, Att'ys-at-Law.

These gentlemen stand among the wealthiest and most successful business men of North Carolina, and their names are a guarantee of the Company's honesty, conservatism and success. We heartily recommend the Company to the property owners of Wilmington. We also represent other good companies, and do a general insurance business. Come to see us.

Ten lines of solid Nonpareil type make one square.

THE WEEKLY STAR is published every Friday morning at $1 00 per year, 50 cents for six months, 30 cents for three months.

All announcements of Fairs, Festivals, Balls, Hops, Picnics, Society Meetings, Political Meetings, &c., will be charged regular advertising rates.

Notices under head of "City Items" 20 cents per line for first insertion, and 15 cents per line for each subsequent insertion.

Advertisements discontinued before the time contracted for has expired charged transient rates for time actually published.

No advertisements inserted in Local Columns at any price.

All announcements and recommendations of candidates for office, whether in the shape of communications or otherwise, will be charged as advertisements.

Payments for transient advertisements must be made in advance. Known parties, or strangers with proper reference, may pay monthly or quarterly, according to contract.

Remittances must be made by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, Express or in Registered Letter. Only such remittances will be at the risk of the publisher.

Communications, unless they contain important news or discuss briefly and properly subjects of real interest, are not wanted; and, if acceptable in every other way, they will invariably be rejected if the real name of the author is withheld.

Notices of Marriage or Death, Tributes of Respect Resolutions of Thanks, &c., are charged for as ordinary advertisements, but only half rates when paid for strictly in advance. At this rate 50 cents will pay for a simple announcement of Marriage or Death.

An extra charge will be made for double-column or triple-column advertisements.

Advertisements inserted once a week in Daily will be charged $1 00 per square for each insertion. Every other day, three-fourths of daily rate. Twice a week, two-thirds of daily rate.

Contract advertisers will not be allowed to exceed their space or advertise anything foreign to their regular business without extra charge at transient rates.

Advertisements kept under the head of "New Advertisements" will be charged fifty per cent. extra.

Advertisements to follow reading matter, or to occupy any special place, will be charged extra according to the position desired.

TUESDAY MORNING, AUG. 27, 1895

WILL MORE BONDS BE NEEDED?

This is a question which, it is said, is now engaging more or less the attention of some of the Treasury people at Washington. They are not afraid, we are told, that there will be withdrawals of gold enough to put the reserve much below the $100,000,000 mark, and they expect that when the shipments of grain, cotton, &c., begin that gold enough will come this way to prevent any further drains upon the Treasury and put it at its ease. But they do not expect this condition of affairs to last long and the opinion is pretty freely expressed by some who keep an eye on the money movement that there will be another bond issue in the latter part of this year or early in the next.

As we see it the ability to maintain the gold reserve without the co-operation of some syndicate depends mainly on the demand for gold. If the demand be such as to make a margin for profit to the speculator who ships gold there will be runs on the Treasury, but if there be no such demand there will be little inducement to the raiders and the reserve may be kept up without much trouble.

But there is something else which may cause raiding. They are talking now about a "redundant currency," by which they mean the $346,000,000 of greenbacks of which they want to get rid, and thus not only get rid of the "pump," as Mr. Benedict styles the greenback, but at the same time contract the currency to that extent. The gentlemen who are moving in this direction now, following the example of Secretary Morton, may wish to give another "object lesson" on the pumping capacity of the greenback, and start a raid on the Treasury, knock a big hole in the reserve, force another issue of bonds, and exclaim "behold what the old greenback is doing," and then raise the cry all along the line for the instantaneous, or thereabouts, retiring of the greenbacks.

As part of the programme to effect this it is suggested that Congress may be asked, as the last Congress was asked, to give the Secretary of the Treasury authority to issue temporary certificates or evidences of indebtedness which he could pay out instead of the redeemed greenbacks, and thus enable him to lock up all the greenbacks that come in for redemption. But this, it seems to us, would necessitate the issuing of a good many of these certificates to lock up enough of the greenbacks to deprive them of their "pumping" capacity, in addition to which the law requiring the reissuing of the greenbacks when redeemed would have to be repealed, and there isn't the most distant probability that the next Congress will do this. If the House did, the Senate wouldn't, for there is a majority of silver men in the Senate, and they are not going to agree to any financial legislation that does not recognize silver. And we do not believe that, under present conditions, the House would either, for it is a Republican House, and although it might, if we had a Republican President in the White House, favor legislation the intent of which was to help the Treasury, it will play politics now, and take mighty good care not to help the Treasury out of its embarrassments while Mr. Cleveland's term lasts. When it comes to politics the average Republican statesman is as cold-blooded as a terrapin, and as unscrupulous as a pirate, and in their estimation it is good politics to keep this administration embarrassed and hard run to raise money to meet its obligations without issuing bonds. They already comment with gleeful satisfaction on the three issues that have been made, and doubtless a fourth and fifth would fill them with delight, although they wouldn't give expression to their delight in public.

Viewing it as we do, with a Republican House and a silver Senate we do not see any prospects for any material change in our currency system, nor for any legislation that will assist the Treasury to keep up the gold reserve without issuing more bonds, which those entrusted with maintaining the credit of the Treasury will issue as soon as they think it advisable. They have gone into the bond business to stick to gold, and they will have to stick to the bonds to get gold, as there is no other way in sight to get it.

The Treasury would be relieved of its embarrassments without any legislative action, or new currency schemes, or issuing certificates of indebtedness, or without going again upon the market to borrow gold, if the Secretary would plant himself on the law and pay in the kind of money he is authorized by law to pay—that is, in "coin." He does the people of the United States an injustice when he lets the creditor exercise the option which the law vests in himself, and he is thus contributing to make the Treasury the victim of the gold speculators for whose benefit, and for whose benefit only, that gold reserve, the invention of John Sherman, is kept up, the keeping up of which keeps the Treasury on the ragged edge and costs the people millions of dollars, out of which they are needlessly plundered. Let the administrators of the law get within the law; let them deal with silver as it is entitled to be dealt with under the law, and that will solve the gold reserve question and put an end to the embarrassments of the Treasury.

MINOR MENTION.

The reports of the U. S. Department of Agriculture show the somewhat remarkable fact that instead of increasing our exports of dairy products to Europe they have declined within the past twenty years, at a rate which if kept up for a few years longer would wipe out the business altogether. In 1881 we shipped abroad $22,636,272 worth of dairy products against $6,413,072 worth the past year, and this in the face of the fact that rapid transportation by land and by sea has been immensely improved within this time, with the addition of refrigerator cars, refrigerator ships, &c. Possibly some of these dairy products have been outmarketed by olemargarine and other compounds, which have been put upon the market as butter and given American butter a black eye; we don't know about that, but the fact remains that we are losing this trade, which is being taken away from us by Denmark and other European countries, and even by far away Australia and New Zealand. England imported in 1894 $65,553,794 worth of butter, of which little Denmark furnished $28,439,602 against $681,052 worth from this country. France supplied $11,445,224 worth; Sweden $6,880,155; Holland $4,048,690, and Germany $3,420,955 worth. She imported $26,705,815 worth of cheese, of which only $7,827,302 went from this country while Canada exported $13,185,754 worth. These European competitors may be able to put their dairy products in the English markets for less money than we can, but there is no reason why they should, considering the fact that our pasturage is much cheaper than theirs, but the probabilities are that they handle and prepare them for market more carefully and make more effort to build up the trade.

A London cable dispatch announces that in reply to a question in the House of Commons as to whether he would advise the calling of an international monetary conference, Mr. Balfour replied that although he was in favor of international agreement he had no right to speak for his colleagues and that he had his doubts whether such a conference would be successful. Mr. Balfour is a strong bimetallist, but has litte hope of seeing his views adopted for some time to come. As England has been the chief obstacle to the holding of an international conference there is nothing left for other nations to do but to await England's pleasure or to proceed independently and let England pursue her own policy. One thing is certain and that is that while by holding aloof the money-lenders of England can continue to control the financial systems of Europe and of this country, she will never go into an international conference, but as soon as she discovers that other nations act independently, and that her trade is suffering in consequence, she will tumble in with a celerity equalled only by the obstinacy with which she now keeps out. But here the question arises, when is this country to have true bimetallism, which the "sound money" men profess to be anxious for, if we are to wait for "international agreement" and international agreement must wait for the assent and co-operation of the gold monometallists of England? They may as well quit talking that kind of nonsense, and trying to fool us with that (to use their own language) "delusion and snare."

The day of the old cotton bale seems to be numbered, the cylindrical bale coming to the front and taking its place. There are now three processes of baling in this way, two of which roll the cotton as it is ginned in a sheet like batting on a core, subjecting it to a pressure that makes it almost as solid as wood, the result being that 500 pounds of lint can be put in a bale about half the size of the old style bale. The other process winds the lint on a core as it comes from the gin without putting it in the shape of batting. Practically there is but little difference between the three methods, so little that there is likely to be a contest over them in the courts, the inventor of the first, which has been in use a couple years in Texas, claiming that the others are an infringement upon his method. This is the only one of the three which has as yet been put into practical use, but it has been so well demonstrated that the bales put up in this way have so many advantages over the old bale that it is only a question of time when the cylindrical bale will take the field. It is claimed that by this method there will be a saving of $4 a bale in preparing for market, with little or no dirt, little or no wear and tear, and practical immunity from fire, as the bales are so compactly pressed as to be proof against fire, as much so as a block of hard wood.

—— Gov. McKinley will have to look after his fences. The lynching of a negro murderer who was a probable lunatic was bad enough, but the prefatory torture was still more horrible. If such things may happen in Ohio and go uncorrected, we shall no longer be able to lift deprecating hands and show the whites of our eyes when we look southward.—Phil Record, Dem.

—— Some scattered Republicans may talk free silver, but when the time comes they will be found voting against Democratic candidates with all the delight of gratified hostility. WHERE HUXLEY FAILED.

The Great Scientist, as a Manipulator of Shears, Shamed by a Porter.

Rather a good story is told about Professor Huxley when he was delivering a lecture to the Literary and Philosophical society, Newcastle-on-Tyne, about 20 years ago. The subject was "The Geographical Distribution of Fossil Remains of Animals;" consequently numerous diagrams were required. Old Alexander, the porter of the institution and quite a distinguished character among the members of the society, was assisting the professor to hang the diagrams. The screen on which the diagrams were hung was not very large, and Huxley, do as he would, could not prevent the blank corner of one diagram overlapping the illustration of another one on which the professor placed great importance.

What was to be done? The professor asked Alexander to bring a pair of scissors. Lord Armstrong (then Sir William), Dr. Watson and several others were present at the time. The scissors were brought, but as the joint was somewhat loose the professor was not able to cut the paper and threw the scissors down in disgust, adding that they were useless.

"Vera guid shears, professor," said Alexander.

"I tell you they won't cut," said Huxley.

"Try again," said Alexander. "They will cut."

The professor tried again, and not succeeding said somewhat angrily, "Bring me another pair of scissors."

Sir William Armstrong then stepped forward and ordered Alexander to go and buy a new pair.

"Vera guid shears, Sir William," persisted Alexander, and picking up the scissors from the table and placing his thumb and forefinger into the handles he stepped forward and asked Huxley how he wanted the paper cut.

"I tell you they won't cut," said the professor.

"Bring me a new pair instantly," said Sir William.

"A tell'ee ther-r vera guid shears, only the professor canna cut wi' them," replied Alexander.

"Well, then, cut it there," said Huxley somewhat tartly, at the same time indicating the place with his forefinger. Alexander took hold of the paper, and inserting the scissors pressed the blades together and cut off the required portion as neatly as if he had used a straightedge; then, turning to the professor, with a rather significant leer and twinkle of the eye, said, "Seeance an airt dinna gang thegither, professor."

The professor and all present collapsed. Huxley put his hand into his pocket, and taking out a sovereign gave it to Alexander, adding at the same time, "You have done me." The same evening Alexander related the story with great gusto over a glass of whisky to a friend. When asked how he dared to make so free with such a distinguished man, he replied with great emphasis, "Lord, mon, they bits o' professor bodies ken naething at a' except their buiks."—Westminster Gazette.

SHOULDER STRAPS STOPPED HIM.

A Story of Lieutenant Guy Preston's Heroism at Standing Rock.

"Do you know Lieutenant Guy Preston?" asked an army officer stopping at the Windsor. "No? Well, he's a good fellow. You want to cultivate him if he ever strays this far away from his station at Fort Robinson.

"I know a fairly good story about him, if you care to have it.

"He was one of the younger class of second lieutenants that came into the northwest just before the Indian troubles which culminated in the fight at Wounded Knee. Preston had been assigned to duty in the Ninth cavalry, the 'black regiment,' you know, and those negro soldiers had a pretty strong doubt about his heroic qualities.

"But he gathered his men, according to orders, when the hostiles were rounded up there at Standing Rock and held one side of the square which inclosed the warlike and dangerous band of savages. The Indians had come out of their tents with their blankets around them, and their leaders declared that they were unarmed, and that they wanted to 'talk.' The negro cavalrymen, dismounted and 'resting at will,' were inclined to wander about rather more than was agreeable to Preston's tidy West Point ideas, and he hauled them back in line. They looked at his jaunty uniform and almost wished they might see him in real trouble, just for the pleasure of testing him.

"Well, the Indians got to the middle of the horseshoelike inclosure of troops, and then at a given signal by their chiefs they threw off their blankets, and each one was seen armed with a rifle, hatchet and scalping knife. They fired point blank at close range and with deadly effect at the soldiers. Of course you know the story of the battle. That is a tale that is told.

"The attack was so sudden and so unexpected that the soldiers were thrown into confusion, and they turned and ran to cover. It was the worst possible thing, but the first thing that suggested itself to the imperiled men.

"Only Lieutenant Guy Preston, the youthful West Pointer, looking around at that savage band of murderers, caught sight of the gold bars on his shoulder straps—the insignia of a rank in the army of the nation. And the thought came, 'I can't run away carrying that.' And he halted, turned, called back his men and formed the first line which repulsed the Indians and finally conquered them.

"Maybe it isn't as much of a story as it seemed at the beginning, and yet I have always thought it was well illustrative of the view an army officer must take of his position. He cannot carry the proofs of that position, the evidences of a trust reposed in him by his country—he cannot carry that insignia to dishonor."—New York Herald.

CARE FOR THE HOME.

Somebody Must Do It—Is It to Be Lordly Man's Mission?

What are we to do with our girls? Time was in other days when things were not as they are now that this query was the basis of much discussion and dismal forebodings, for girls were quite as numerous then as now, while the avenues either for matrimony or an independent livelihood were fewer, as well as narrower, than they now are. The girls cut a far wider swath in the life of the nation in these days, but the question of what to do with them remains just as unsettled and just as serious. They are side by side in competition with man in the race for employment and profitable wages, and with labor saving machinery also cutting down his opportunity for work the wage earner who assumes the responsibilities of family finds his income menaced from two sources, neither of which he can successfully oppose. We have not yet begun to realize in this country how great a revolution in wages these two factors must ultimately bring about, nor the impossibility of man's ever regaining a single inch of the ground he is steadily losing to both of them. I can recall the time, for instance, not ten years ago, when I could enumerate on the fingers of one hand the number of young women engaged in regular work for the New York city dailies. Today their number is bewildering. No newspaper is without its special woman writers. I give this illustration because I am familiar with the facts from personal knowledge, yet I presume it is as true of other lines of work as it is of newspaper making. Miss or Mrs. is no longer a surprising prefix to the name on a doctor's sign in any of our large cities.

It is in other grades of work, however, in which women, and especially young girls, are fast crowding. Indeed the time seems to be rapidly approaching when in the household of the masses the question of what line of employment to choose for girls is to be quite as pertinent and serious as the selection of one for the boys. If accurate figures could be obtained of the increase during the last ten years in the number of girls who leave their homes daily to engage in work, the aggregate would, I believe, startle even those who profess to have some knowledge on the subject. Desire in many instances, necessity in many more, are responsible for their presence in the ranks of labor, but whether it be desire or necessity the fact remains that young women are an increasing feature of the workaday life of the country, and it seems to me to be a condition calculated to have a marked influence on our national future. Whether a young girl has touched elbows with the world who has encountered the material rather than the romantic side of life—who, in fact, comes to know at 20 what her grandmother learned at 40—whether she can ever feel entirely at ease in the home circle with the companionship of her own is the most serious phase of the many sided problem involved in all this talk of the woman of today.

Now, the point to seriously consider is that somebody must care for the home, somebody must give it an attractiveness and an atmosphere which, midst pleasures and palaces though we may roam, be it ever so humble there's no place like home!

Somebody, I repeat, must do this. Is it to be man?—Peterson's Magazino.

No Danger In Impure Air.

A paper read at a session of the National Academy of Sciences in Washington by Dr. John S. Billings on the composition of exhaled air created much interest and provoked considerable discussion. Dr. Billings reached the conclusion that in the exhaled breath no conditions of disease exist and no poisonous bacteria are contained. The paper maintained that the breath even of a consumptive is not dangerous. It is only when the subject coughs or sneezes that the exhalation bears the germs of disease. It is never in the air itself that such disease spreads, but in the dust from sputa. The whole theory of the paper was subversive of accepted ideas of ventilation. Dr. Billings even went so far as to say that aside from the matter of inhaling poisonous organic matter breathing the pure air of the mountains secures no special immunity from disease over breathing the air of the slums. Neither produces disease.

Professor Remsen of Johns Hopkins said this paper would upset all accepted notions on the subject. Professor Bowditch of Harvard said he agreed with the general line of results brought out by Dr. Billings and thought the skin was a great source of disease conditions.

A Substitute For Gold.

A French technical paper, The Journal de l'Horlogerie, declares that a new amalgam has been discovered which is a wonderful substitute for gold. It consists of 94 parts of copper to six parts of antimony. The copper is melted and the antimony is then added. Once the two metals are sufficiently fused together a little magnesium and carbonate of lime are added to increase the density of the material. The product can be drawn, wrought and soldered just like gold, which it almost exactly resembles on being polished. Even when exposed to the action of ammoniacal salts of nitrous vapors it preserves its color. The cost of making it is about a shilling a pound avoirdupois.

All the Difference In the World.

Rural Magistrate—Konrad, you are charged with committing an assault on the night watchman.

Konrad—I only threw his jacket behind the stove.

Night Watchman—Yes, your worship, but I was inside the jacket, and that makes all the difference.—Dorfbarbier.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had Consumption, and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her, and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St. San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching Consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in Coughs and Colds. Free trial bottles at R. R. BELLAMY'S Drug Store. Regular size 50c and $1.00. † accomplishes for everybody exactly what is claimed for it. One of the reasons for the great popularity of the Mustang Liniment is found in its universal applicability. Everybody needs such a medicine.

The Lumberman needs it in case of accident.
The Housewife needs it for general family use.
The Canaler needs it for his teams and his men.
The Mechanic needs it always on his work bench.
The Miner needs it in case of emergency.
The Pioneer needs it—can't get along without it.
The Farmer needs it in his house, his stable, and his stock yard.
The Steamboat man or the Boatman needs it in liberal supply afloat and ashore.
The Horse-fancier needs it—it is his best friend and safest reliance.
The Stock-grower needs it—it will save him thousands of dollars and a world of trouble.
The Railroad man needs it and will need it so long as his life is a round of accidents and dangers.
The Backwoodsman needs it. There is nothing like it as an antidote for the dangers to life, limb and comfort which surround the pioneer.
The Merchant needs it about his store among his employees. Accidents will happen, and when these come the Mustang Liniment is wanted at once.
Keep a Bottle in the House. 'Tis the best of economy.
Keep a Bottle in the Factory. Its immediate use in case of accident saves pain and loss of wages.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

ARDENT DISCIPLES OF WOMAN'S RIGHTS IN FRANCE.

National Council of Women—Era of the Filthy Glove—Eternal Fitness of Things. Camilla Collet—A Plucky Woman—Florence Nightingale Seventy-five.

Frenchwomen of the present day are no longer satisfied with merely being allowed into the precincts of the house of deputies. They demand rights of a braver nature, and the deputies of the last decade of the nineteenth century are now considering their demands.

Such women as Mmes. Potonie-Pierre, Maria Martin, Marie Pognon-Coutant demand rights that shall place them on a level footing with men, and they have succeeded so far in enlisting in their cause many prominent deputies who have formed the parliamentary group of "woman's rights."

To tell the truth, there are not many women in France today who take very great interest in the question of woman's rights. But if there is not quantity there is quality.

At the present day the most ardent disciples are Mme. Potonie-Pierre and Mme. Maria Martin. Those two ladies, with Mme. Bogelot, who attended the women's congress at the World's Columbian exposition, walk in the footsteps of Maria Deraimes, to whom they were ever most devoted.

They are the correspondents of many of the organizations of women, both in the United States and in England. Mme. Potonie-Pierre is secretary of the leading French organization of women, La Solidarite des Femmes, and also of the French branch of the Universal and International Union of the Women of England.

Mme. Maria Martin is now the editor of the only newspaper published in the interests of women in France, Le Journal des Femmes, after having attained the unique position of being editor of a political journal strongly devoted to the interests of her own sex.

During the last three months of the year 1894 women took a great stride in advance. After repeated demands made by the women to the deputies a meeting was finally organized and a parliamentary group formed. The majority of the socialist members at once joined the group, and many, without a moment's hesitation, expressed themselves willing to indorse the most radical demands of the programme presented by the women.

The women demand a favorable vote in the chamber of deputies on the proposition of a law giving all women of age and not deprived of their civil rights the right to act as a witness on all certificates and civil documents. They also claim the nomination of a committee of 44 members to reconsider and reform the entire civil code, and especially to modify article 8, which says that every Frenchman shall be possessed of civil rights, making it read, "Every person, without distinction of sex, shall be possessed of civil rights."

National Council of Women.

The National Council of Women is one of the grandest and largest organizations of women that the world has ever known. Its very being and the possibility of its creation marks an era in the world's history. At its last convention in Washington a few months since there were gathered the most eminent women of the land, together with delegates from every civilized country.

The council has a paid membership of 700,000 members, and there are probabilities of it becoming more potent than even the political conventions of men in its direction of affairs which touch upon the family and the state.

This immense organization is described at length in Peterson's Magazine by Margherita Arlina Hamm, who is editor of its woman's department. She tells of the method of organization of the rules and governing forces, the personalities which have made all centralize and harmonize for one prevailing object.

Some of the famous women spoken of are Mary Lowe Dickinson, May Wright Sewall, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Susan B. Anthony, Lillie Devereux Blake, Carrie Lane Chapman Catt, Harriet Keyser, Mary C. Francis, Ellen Battelo Dietrick, Ida M. Rew, Mme. Eva Alberti, Cynthia M. Westover, Emma Cranmer, Lady Henry Somerset, Elizabeth Grannis, Marianna Chapman, Sarah Cooper, Frances Willard, Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, Rev. Carrie Bartlett, Mrs. Holbrook, LL. B., Cornelia K. Hood, LL. B., Rev. Ida C. Hultin, Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, Dr. Marie Strickland, Dr. Mary Green and Alice Stone Blackwell.

The best types of the members are arranged in classes according to their professions, philanthropies or work. The article is a memorial to woman's energy and growing importance.

Era of the Filthy Glove.

This season might be not inaptly described as the era of the filthy glove. At matinees, receptions, church, in the street cars and stages swarms of well dressed women display hand covering so dirty as to be as disgusting to a person of refined taste as soiled fingers.

Among a hundred fashionably dressed women picked out at random at any daytime function there will not be more than five pairs of spotless white gloves. Women could not be induced to wear dirty white lace bonnets, nor carry soiled handkerchiefs or dirty visiting cards, or wear dirt begrimed collars or cuffs. Are dirty light gloves a whit daintier or more presentable than any of the objects named?

Fashion having decreed white gloves to be en rigueur, the lady from the suburban districts must also don them when she comes into town for the day's shopping. And she is to be seen on the avenue in full chase after bargains, her appropriate cloth costume disfigured by the dirty white gloves which loudly proclaim her lack of refined taste or even of commonplace cleanliness. But then she and the town lady belong to the sex that in the preceding generation, according to the chronicles, engaged in amateur street sweeping, substituting "trains" for brooms, and that carried a miscellaneous assortment of rarely if ever cleaned "rats" on the head. The dirty gloves are, it must be confessed, an improvement on either of the foregoing, and in the process of time these offenders against good taste may come to acknowledge that daintiness ought to stand first in a woman's calendar of social graces. —Vogue.

POE KNEW ARBON.

The Poet Wrote of the Third Constituent of the Atmosphere.

Will Lord Rayleigh and Professor Ramsay have to share the honor of "spotting" the third constituent of the atmosphere with Edgar Allan Poe? It certainly looks like it, if we consider the evidence adduced by a correspondent of a French journal, who has been dipping into the "Tales of Mystery and Imagination." The passage upon which this gentleman rests Poe's claims is contained in "The Unparalleled Adventure of One Hans Pfaall." It is worth while quoting it in full:

"I then took opportunities of conveying by night to a retired situation east of Rotterdam five iron bound casks, to contain about 50 gallons each, and one of a larger size; six tin tubes 8 inches in diameter, properly shaped and 10 feet in length; a quantity of a particular metallic substance, or semimetal, which I shall not name, and a dozen demijohns of a very common acid. The gas to be formed from these latter materials is a gas never yet generated by any other person than myself—or at least applied to any similar purpose. I can only venture to say here that it is a constituent of azote (nitrogen), so long considered irreducible, and that its density is about 37.4 times less than of hydrogen. It is tasteless, but not odorless; burns, when pure, with a greenish flame and is instantaneously fatal to animal life. Its full secret I would make no difficulty in disclosing, but that it of right belongs to a citizen of Nantes, in France, by whom it was conditionally communicated to myself."

It must be confessed that the mysterious gas evolved by the force of Poe's imagination has not a little in common with the argon, whose acquaintance we are now privileged to make some 50 years later. The "particular metallic substance or semimetal," used by Hans Pfaall, has its fellow in clevite, from which we have been led to understand argon has been extracted when treated with an acid, after the manner of the veracious Dutch balloonist. If the new gas is not precisely regarded as "a constituent of nitrogen," it has at least been declared by some to be an allotropic modification of it. No doubt the physical and chemical qualities of Edgar Allan Poe's gas are not exactly those of argon. But what of that? Instead, for example, of being 37 times lighter than hydrogen, argon, we understand, is very much heavier. It must be remembered, however, that Hans Pfaall had to make a journey to the moon. Had his gas been heavier, how could he have dropped a couple of ballast bags on the head of Mynheer Superbus Van Underduk, and have disappeared above the clouds almost before the worthy burgomaster had recovered himself? The romancer, even when he is a man of science, must surely be allowed a little latitude with his chemistry.—Westminster Gazette.

A SPANISH ANECDOTE.

A Moor Whose Son Was Killed Assists the Murderer to Escape.

A Spanish cavalier, in a sudden quarrel, slew a Moorish gentleman and fled. His pursuers soon lost sight of him, for he had unperceived thrown himself over a garden wall. The owner, a Moor, happening to be in his garden, was addressed by the Spaniard, on his knees, who acquainted him with his case and implored concealment. "Eat this," said the Moor, "you know that you may confide in my protection." He then locked him up in his garden apartment, telling him that as soon as it was night he would provide for his escape to a place of safety.

The Moor then went to his house, where he had just seated himself, when a great crowd, with loud lamentations, came to his gate, bringing the corpse of his son, who had just been killed by the Spaniard. When the first shock of surprise was a little over, he learned, from the description given, that the fatal deed was done by the very person then in his power. He mentioned this to no one, but as soon as it was dark, retired to his garden, as if to grieve alone, giving orders that none should follow him. Then, accosting the Spaniard, he said: "Christian, the person you have killed is my son; his body is now in my house. You ought to suffer, but you have eaten with me, and I have given you my faith, which must not be broken." He then led the astonished Spaniard to his stables, and mounted him on one of his fleetest horses, and said:

"Fly far while the night can cover you; you will be safe in the morning. You are indeed guilty of my son's blood, but God is just and good, and I thank him I am innocent of yours, and that my faith given is preserved!" His point of honor is, it is said, most religiously observed by the Arabs and Saracens, from whom it was adopted by the Moors of Africa and by them was brought into Spain.

A STOLEN SECRET.

How Minister Jewell Learned to Make Russia Leather.

Jewell, like all men brought up to learn a trade, and who afterward gained prominence in affairs, made now and then unconscious revelations of his early training. During one of the campaigns in which he was engaged he found himself at a country hotel where the table was bounteous, but the rooms few and small. It was necessary in order that the whole party might be housed for each bed to be occupied by two persons. The governor's roommate was a young politician, who could not hide his surprise when the governor just before retiring rolled the sleeves of his night shirt even as far up as his shoulders, and then bathed his arms in cold water.

"You wonder why I do this," said the governor. "Well, I couldn't sleep unless I did. When I was a youngster learning the tanners' trade, I used to have my arms in the vats all day long, and at night my skin would smart as though I had been stung by nettles. I could not bear to have any cloth touch them. So I got the habit of rolling my shirt sleeves as far as I could, and thus I have slept ever since."

When Jewell was minister to Russia, he played a Yankee trick upon the Russians, the benefits of which we are reaping even to this day in this country. Like every other American tanner, he had long wanted to know the secret of the process of manufacturing Russian leather. He had experimented with a few dollars himself, only to learn that the secret was not to be discovered.

When at the court of St. Petersburg, he professed great interest in Russian industries and was shown through many of the manufactories there. By and by there came an opportunity to go through a factory where Russia leather was manufactured. Jewell was all smiles and courtesies and seemed profoundly interested in those things which really did not interest him and wholly blind to the very things he went to that place to see. But he was not so blind as they thought. When he came out of that factory, he had discovered, as he believed, the process, and he brought the discovery back to this country with him, so that by and by the United States began to turn out a very good article of leather resembling the Russian product.—Philadelphia Press.

The Fisherman and the Bullfrog.

"The bullfrog," said a fisherman, "seems to like to have its back scratched. I reached over one that I came across sitting quietly in the bullrushes and scratched its back gently with the tip of my fishing rod, and when I drew the rod away it put up its clumsy hands as much as to say, 'More.'"—New York Sun.

THE FRENCH ÆSOP.

LA FONTAINE, THE FABULIST, WAS A VERY PECULIAR MAN.

Absentmindedness, Inattention and Indolence the Chief Characteristics of This Man of Remarkable Genius—Some Interesting Anecdotes.

La Fontaine, the inimitable French fabulist, died on April 13, 1695. The bicentenary of this event recalls one of the most piquant personalities in the history of literature.

La Harpe has said that "La Fontaine invented nothing except his style, and the secret of that died with him," but that is saying a good deal. For himself La Fontaine counted it nothing to have produced a set of fables which rival and perhaps eclipse those of Æsop and Phædrus. He wrote merely, as he declared, to divert himself. His diversion assumed many forms. Sometimes it consisted in long spells of profound and unadulterated idleness. At others it took the shape of protracted and concentrated effort upon some object of activity—it might be the fighting of a duel, the composition of a fable or the observation and study of animal habit. Whatever it was that occupied his mind, whether a vacuum or a verse, it engrossed the man's whole being, so that to the outside world he seemed like one living in a series of hypnotic trances. It needed a strong shock to break through the wall of inattention to passing events which nature had built around Jean la Fontaine.

A volume could be filled with illustrative anecdotes—as authentic as such anecdotes can be. His father held the position of commissioner of forests to the French government at Chateau Thierry. The young La Fontaine, dispatched one day to Paris on urgent business, happened to fall in with a friend on his arrival in the capital. They dined together and went to the play. La Fontaine went home next day. "Well," said his father, "have you arranged everything satisfactorily?" The youth opened his eyes with astonishment and had to confess that he had forgotten all about the business till that moment. In time La Fontaine succeeded to his father's government post—almost a sinecure—and continued to "divert himself" by country life. This meant the total neglect of his family and his estate and the omission of what few official duties he had. He verified a little, read much and lounged and dreamed a great deal. He did not care for French writers, preferring Latin, Greek and Italian, because they "diverted him more."

Chancing to see some of his fugitive lines, the Duchess of Bouillon perceived the incipient genius of La Fontaine. She constituted herself his patron, brought him to Paris and introduced him to the court society of Louis XIV. He became fast friends with Moliere, Bulleau and Racine, and assumed the regular—or irregular—life of a court poet in the gay and frivolous capital. But through it all he remained the simple, docile, absentminded dreamer, utterly careless and oblivious of the serious side of things. Racine's religious scruples caused him to remonstrate with his friend on his prolonged absence from Mme. La Fontaine, who all this time had remained at Chateau Thierry. La Fontaine readily admitted the justice of the reproof, pleaded that the selfishness of his conduct had never occurred to him, and to make amends at once started on a visit to his wife. He returned from Chateau Thierry the next day. Racine inquired after Mme. La Fontaine. "I did not see her," said her husband. "How," asked Racine, "not see her? Was she from home?" "Yes, she was gone to prayers, and the servant, not knowing me, would not let me stay in the house till she returned." He was honestly satisfied that he had done his duty, and doubtless straightway forgot both the incident and Mme. La Fontaine.

The extremeness of his apathy is suggested rather than recorded by the story that he fell asleep in the theater during the first performance of an opera he had written. It is seriously narrated by most of his biographers that once when dining out he requested to be introduced to a young man whose conversation (overheard at table) had pleased him. "Why," said his hostess, "that is your own son." "Ah," replied La Fontaine, "I thought I had seen him before." And, contented, he passed on to talk to some one else. There is greater probability of authenticity in the story that when introduced to Louis XIV, that he might present the king with a book of his poems, La Fontaine searched his pockets in vain, and then tremblingly confessed that he had forgotten to bring the volume with him. The king laughed at the misadventure and cheered the crestfallen poet with a purse of gold. The event failed to stimulate his dormant faculties; he left his purse of gold behind in the carriage.

Good natured, improvident, easy going and entirely devoid of business capacity, La Fontaine soon lost his patrimony and became dependent on the pockets of his friends and patrons. It was his good fortune to find a home ready to his hand always at the critical moment. When the Duchess of Bouillon was exiled he was received into her establishment and pensioned by Henrietta, daughter of Charles I of England and wife of the Duke of Orleans. Her death threw La Fontaine on his beam ends for a moment—if indeed the metaphor be applicable to one fated to sail in smooth waters. But immediately he was rescued from distress by Mme. de la Sabliere, and he enjoyed free rooms. She had occasion once to discharge her whole establishment, "except," she added as an afterthought in narrating the circumstance, "my three pets—my cat, my dog and La Fontaine." The husband of Mme. de la Sabliere was cheated in a love affair with an actress and committed suicide at the romantic age of 65. His wife died broken hearted soon afterward.

La Fontaine was once more destitute. Again a great lady came to his rescue. Mme. d'Hervart, having heard of his distress, proceeded to offer him an asylum in her house. Setting out on that very errand, she met the poor poet in the street. "La Fontaine, come and live in my house," she said, without preamble. "I was just going, madam," he answered with equal directness.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Fert Retort.

This story is told of a master of Trinity college in days long gone by who had a partiality for figs. He held that there was one supreme moment in the existence of a fig when it should be eaten, not a minute before or after, and he watched over his fig tree with tenderness and devotion. It was a mild year, and the sun had done his best in the perfecting process, and hoping to enjoy his favorite fruit on the morrow the master wrapped a piece of silver paper round it, leaving it labeled, "The master's fig." What a very foolish thing to do with a few hundred "undergrads" about! The auspicious day dawned, and the master, looking at his watch for the last time, walked confidently across the quad. But imagine his dismay on finding his precious tidbit gone, and on the now empty packet the label, "A fig for the master."—Household Words.

Chateau Lafitte.

In 1793 the vineyard belonged to M. de Pichard, president of the Guienne parliament, and the republican leaders did a good stroke of business by guillotining him and appropriating his property. It was, however, soon sold by the state, and after passing from purchaser to purchaser at an average price of about £40,000 it was bought some 25 years ago by Baron James de Rothschild for £180,000 and still remains in his family. About £6,000 a year is spent on its cultivation. There is perhaps no wine that gains more by keeping, and some seven or eight years ago a bin of the vintage of 1864 fetched no less than 50 francs a bottle at Bordeaux itself.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Sharp Witted Cat.

A correspondent of the London Spectator reports a clever trick of a black Persian cat of the name of Prin. One of his peculiarities is a disrelish of meats unless they are roasted. The cook undertook to break him of this foolish whim. In short, she determined to starve it out of him.

She set before him a saucer of boiled meat. Prin turned away from it in disgust. "Very well," said the cook. "It is that or nothing."

For three days the cat went hungry, the boiled meat remaining untouched. But on the fourth morning the cook found the saucer empty.

"Ah, Prin," she said, "so you have come to your meat."

That day the cat fared sumptuously on roast beef with plenty of gravy. But on Saturday, when the potboard under the dresser was cleaned, the cook found in one of the stewpans the boiled meat which had remained three days in Prin's saucer. The cat had been too sharp for her.

"I know this story to be true," concludes the correspondent.

Love.

Love, like faith, is reasonable, yet it is not attained by a process of reasoning. Love is consistent with reason, but reason is not its basis. A mother's love for her child is reasonable, yet a mother does not wait to argue herself into a conviction that it is right for her to love that child before she gives it her love. The highest human love is prompted by the truest instincts of the soul and not by the logic of the cold intellect. Love of God, like love for a human dear one, is prompted by the inner nature of man, and while it is most reasonable it is not a result of reasoning. God is love, and man formed in God's likeness is capable of loving apart from the demands of logic.—Selected.

Go Slow.

My son, you should not be hasty and call a man a liar simply because he never indulges in the truth, but basks continually in the sunshine of mendacity. It is just possible that he may be a statesman.—Boston Transcript.

The Great And Only

Encyclopædia Britannica.

Complete in 25 Volumes

The Encyclopædia Britannica is not only a complete compendium of all knowledge, but it is a dictionary of biography, a record of inventions, a history of discoveries, a calendar of dates, a registry of events, a glossary of technical and scientific terms, a collection of mathematical, chemical, and mechanical formulas, a handbook of law, a medical guide.

Best Atlas in the World.

The most thorough and reliable key to business knowledge, a manual of games, sports and amusements, a theranus of statistics, a history of all countries and people, a storehouse of criticism, a treasury of curious learning, a vade mecum for the household and farm, as for the office and library, a repertory of useful information. If the professional or the business man should undertake to put upon his library shelves the special treaties, which would cover as wide a range of topics as those gathered in the Britannica, relating to his own pursuits, his purchases would extend over scores of volumes, some of them rare and expensive, and many of them not brought down to date.

Of all the works of reference now in the market, the Encyclopædia Britannica is not only the most comprehensive, but by far the cheapest, even at

The STAR will for a short time furnish this great work in Cloth binding at $1.60 per volume; in full sheep at $2.20 per volume, and will deliver the whole set upon payment of $5 cash, giving you long time to pay the balance.

The purchase of any Encyclopædia short of the best is not only bad judgment, but worse economy. The STAR will furnish you this, the greatest literary production of the century, at one-third the former price and on terms so accommodating that none need deny themselves the great advantage of owning this mine of information. Remember that the present is the only time we can call our own. We reserve the privilege of withdrawing this offer at any time. It is made as a favor to the STAR'S readers, and for the purpose of increasing our circulation. You are invited to call and examine the books, or send us your address for further particulars. Out of town subscribers can order by mail, and the books will be sent prepaid.

The Original Price of $8 Per Volume.

Heretofore this work could be obtained only at a great cost—from $125 to $200. It is now, for the first time, placed within reach of the masses. A saving of only 15 cents a day gives you this never-falling fountain of knowledge. Is it not worth such a slight effort to obtain it?

The Morning Star.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

TUESDAY MORNING, AUG. 27, 1895

SPOTS AND FUTURES

The New York Sun's Review of the Situation in Cotton.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The Sun says: Cotton declined three to ten points, but rallied and closed very steady at a decline of one to four points, the distant months showing the most steadiness. The sales were 175,000 bales. Consumption last season approximated 9,000,000 bales, the largest on record, and some are looking for an even larger consumption this year. Liverpool was firm on the spot, with sales of 10,000 bales; futures advanced two and one-half points there, but lost this and closed easy at a decline from Saturday's figures of one point. Manchester was quiet, but firm. New Orleans declined six to eight points, but recovered much of this later on. Spot cotton, however, declined 1-16c in New Orleans, though it was steady here and 1-16c higher at Savannah, and generally steady or firm at Southern markets. New York sold 900 bales to spinners, Savannah sold 1,707 and New Orleans 250. Port receipts were 755 bales, against 953 this day last week and 4,869 last year; Houston receipts 495 bales, against 100 this day last week and 1,826 last year.

To-day's features: Greatly to everybody's surprise Liverpool closed weak at some decline to-day, and this caused not a little selling for local account, while there was also, as was no more than natural after the sharp rise of late, quite a little selling for Southern and European account. Then, too, the weather in the Atlantic States was more favorable; some further gold exports were reported; a decline in spot cotton was reported at New Orleans, and other produce markets showed weakness. Yet toward the close the tone became firmer again, and the net decline for the day was slight, partly owing to pretty good buying by local interests friendly to cotton. Besides the rainfall in Texas was very small and the Signal Service predicted continued fair weather in Texas. The receipts at the ports and the interior towns were still light, and many people believe that cotton at occasional reactions is destined to reach higher figures. There was a pretty good spot demand here, a better trade at Savannah, a fair demand at least at Liverpool, while Manchester was firm and a brisk dry goods business is in progress in this city.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

September Wheat Depressed and Lower—Corn Higher—Oats Lower—Pork Products Dull but Steady.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHICAGO, August 26.—To-day's session was another disappointment to bulls in wheat. The market opened slumpy on heavy shipments from abroad and lower cables, but the Northwestern receipts being considerably under the estimate tended to steady prices. There was also a fair local buying around 61¼c, which was the "Put" price. September wheat opened from 61¼c to 61¼, sold between 61⅝@61½c and 60⅝@60¾c, closing at 61⅛—⅜c under Saturday. Cash wheat was weak and 1c per bushel lower.

Corn—The depressed tone of wheat caused an easy tone in corn, but the market quickly rallied and held steady on covering by 'shorts" and on the large withdrawals from store. September corn opened from 35½c to 35⅛c, sold between 36c and 35¼c, closing at 36—¼c over Saturday. Cash corn was quiet and prices unchanged.

Oats were dull and steady, prices responding to the changes in wheat and corn. The visible supply increased 88,000 bushels. September closed ¼c under Saturday. Cash oats were weak and ½c lower.

Provisions were very dull but steady. Trading was light, consisting mainly of changing from the September options to October and January options. At the close September pork was 2½c higher than Saturday; September lard 2½c lower, and September ribs 5c lower. Domestic markets were quiet and rather steady.

BUTLER'S SILVER CLUBS.

Secretary Coke's Recovery Doubtful—Negro Republicans.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

RALEIGH, N. C., August 26.—Secretary of State Octavius Coke is reported worse to day, and his recovery is extremely doubtful.

Senator Butler, Populist, said to-day that he was receiving every day advices of the organization of free silver clubs, and that the free coinage men would thoroughly organize in the State.

Ex-Representative Cheatham, one of the negro leaders, said to-day that there would be no independent political action by the negroes, as has been anticipated, but that they will vote the Republican ticket as heretofore. The negroes now hold the balance of power in this State.

A VICTIM OF CIGARETTES.

He Smoked About One Hundred a Day.

DEXTER, MO., August 25.—Oscar Cunningham, a young man, died last night from the effects of cigarette poisoning. When death came he was smoking a cigarette, and had grown so emaciated from the use of the poison he had to take to his bed. He awoke at 12 o'clock last night, rolled a cigarette, lighted it, called for a drink of water and expired in an instant. He smoked about one hundred daily.

MURDERERS LYNCHED.

WHOLESALE HANGING IN A CALIFORNIA TOWN.

Four Men Forcibly Taken from Jail by a Mob and Hanged—A Negro Lynched by Negroes.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

YREKA, August 26.—About 1 o'clock this morning a crowd of two hundred and fifty men gathered here to lynch the four negroes in the county jail. Small groups from all over Siskyou county began to arrive on the outskirts of the town about 9 o'clock last night. At 1 o'clock the crowd had gathered. They secured an old rail at the depot and carried it to the court house square, placing it between two trees. The local police were called away by a sham fight. By the time they returned they realized the intention of the crowd. The chief of police went to the engine house to ring the fire-alarm bell but found that the ropes had been cut. He then went to the jail, but the mob had already arrived and in such numbers that the police were powerless. A number of men, all masked, awakened Under-Sheriff Radford, in the sheriff's office in the court house, and demanded the keys of the jail from him. He positively refused to open the door or give up the keys. Finding that Radford was immovable, they went across to the jail and got on top of the stone wall which surrounds it. The deputy sheriff, who sleeps in the jail, fired two shots to alarm the marshal, thinking some of the prisoners were trying to escape. He then opened the door and was immediately seized by the mob who entered the jail. Having no keys to the cells they were compelled to smash the locks with sledge hammers.

Lawrence H. Johnson, who stabbed his wife to death July 28th, was first to receive the attention of the mob. They broke the lock from the door of his cell, and placing a rope around his neck led him out of the jail and across the street to where the iron rail was laid between the forks of two trees. Johnson pleaded for mercy, but the silent gathering gave no heed to his appeals. He was quickly strung up, dying from strangulation.

The mob then returned to the jail and broke into the cell of William Null, who shot Henry Hayton at Callahan's on April 21. Null asked to be allowed to make a statement, but the mob refused to listen and he was soon hanging beside Johnson.

Louis Moreno, who killed George Sears on the 5th inst., was next taken out and hanged.

The last and youngest of the four was Garland Semler, aged 19, who killed Caspar Molverhaus at Balley Hill on the 5th inst. A rope was placed around his neck and in a few minutes he was swinging beside his companions.

About this time Sheriff Hobbs arrived on the scene, but was met by several of the mob who notified him that "the job was finished." By this time the greater part of the mob had disappeared, leaving only a few on guard. Soon these departed also, and the square was soon deserted.

The bodies were taken down by Coroner Schofield and Marshal Parks, who removed them in a wagon to the engine house where they were laid side by side. The coroner summoned a jury to hold the inquest, which is now in progress.

CINCINNATI, August 26.—A special to the Post from Springfield, Ky., says: A mob, composed of a dozen men, all negroes, took Morrison Leads, colored, from the jail here last night and hung him to a tree in the court house yard. About 11 o'clock they attacked the jail and demanded the keys of Jailor Smith, who, having been warned of their approach, escaped out of the back door with the keys. The mob, nothing daunted, repaired to a blacksmith shop, procured a sledge hammer and other tools, and began battering down the doors. It took three hours hard work to reach their victim, but their determination never wavered in the least, and promptly at 2 o'lock this morning he was hung. No resistance was offered the mob, and quite a number of people were on the street while they were at work but were afraid to interfere. The crime for which Lewis was lynched was a most cowardly murder. Last Friday night he went to the house of Joe Brooks, also colored, looking for another negro who had been too intimate with his (Lewis') paramour. Brooks told him that his man was not there, whereupon Lewis fired upon Brooks with a shotgun, killing him instantly.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Movements of U. S. Warships—Three Vessels in Chinese Waters.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, August 26.—A cablegram received at the Navy Department reported the departure to-day of the gunboat Concord from Chemulpo, Corea, for Che Foo, China. Her arrival at Che Foo will increase the number of U. S. vessels there to three, the other two being the flagship Baltimore and the gunboat Yorktown.

Acting Secretary McAdoo, of the Navy Department, told a United Press reporter that he did not know that any significance could be attached to this assemblage of the American naval force at Che Foo. He had given no orders regarding the movement of ships on the Asiatic station, where everything was in the hands of Rear Admiral Carpenter. For this reason Mr. McAdoo was unable to confirm a suspicion that this Government intended to make a demonstration against China on account of the missionary troubles.

A belated telegram received at the Navy Department this afternoon announced the departure from San Francisco for Yokohoma, Japan, of the cruiser Olympia, which will relieve the cruiser Baltimore as flagship of the Asiatic naval station. The Olympia is one of the finest vessels in the navy, and a better selection could not have been made in the event the U. S. Government desires to make a demonstration in Chinese waters on account of the missionary outrages. Her assignment to the Asiatic station was made prior to the Kucheng massacre, so there is no significance in it. The Baltimore will return home.

The Baltimore & Ohio Looking to a Close Alliance of the Two Railroads.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

BALTIMORE, August 26.—Thomas M. King, Vice President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, will start to-day on a trip of inspection over the Roanoke & Southern and the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad lines. Mr. King will be accompanied by Gen. John Gill, receiver of the last named road, and Col. John A. Tompkins, expert accountant. It is said Mr. King's object in making the trip is to examine these railroad properties for the purpose of determining the practicability of bringing them into close alliance with the Baltimore & Ohio, thus giving that road access to a large section of the South and putting it in position to make further connections and extensions in that section. The Valley Railroad of Virginia, which is a part of the Baltimore & Ohio system, extends southward through the Shenandoah Valley from Harper's Ferry, W. Va., to Lexington, Va., about fifty miles from Roanoke, the northern terminus of the Roanoke & Southern. Any project for extending the business of the Baltimore & Ohio southward over the Roanoke & Southern would require the construction of a railroad between Lexington and Roanoke.

The building of such a connection has frequently been urged and the Baltimore & Ohio has surveys for it, which were made some time ago. It has been stated that the extension of the Baltimore & Ohio into the South was delayed and prevented by the urgent necessity of improving its trunk line route between the West and East, which included the building of the Philadelphia branch, traffic arrangements over the Philadelphia & Reading to New York and the securing of terminal facilities in New York and Chicago.

The Roanoke & Southern is 123 miles long and extends south from Roanoke to Winston-Salem, N. C. It is leased by the Norfolk & Western Company. At Winston, connection is made with the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Road, which extends northward from Wilmington, N. C., on the coast, to Mt. Airy, N. C., a few miles south of the Virginia line. The main line of the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Road is 248.28 miles long. It has a half dozen branches which give it a total mileage of 388.68 miles.

Lively Bout Between Frank Erne and Jock Skelly—Jim Handler Knocked Out by Kid Lavigne.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

MASPETH, L. I., Aug. 26.—The new Empire Athletic Club of Maspeth, L. I., to night was formally opened. The principal bout of the evening was between George Lavigne, the Saginaw Kid, and Jimmy Handler, of Newark. There were about 2,000 people present when the opening bout between Frank Erne, of Buffalo, and Jock Skelly, of Brooklyn, was announced. The bout was a lively one, and was of the give-and-take order. Skelly drew the first blood and knock-down, the former in the first round and the latter in the fourth. When the seventh round was reached both men were weak, but fought gamely. Skelly got in a good right on the head and a left hander on the face which made Erne bleed freely. Erne got in a good right hander and then landed twice on the heart and followed up with his left on the face. Skelly sank to the ropes and rolled over on his side. He was unable to get up and was counted out. The round lasted two minutes and forty seconds. Skelly had to be carried to his corner.

The star bout of the evening was between Kid Lavigne, of Saginaw, Mich., and Jimmy Handler, of Newark. The bout was 20 rounds at 144 pounds.

Round 2—Lavigne rushed, landing his left on the neck. He then led for the face and Handler caught him with a left swing on the body and followed it up with his left on the jaw. He went for his man with a series of right and left swings and almost had Handler on the ropes. The round was all in Lavigne's favor.

Round 3—Lavigne got in his left on the nose and landed twice on the face. He then landed heavily with the left and went for his man in terrific style. He fell short with his left and Handler uppercut him. The Kid got in some body blows and drove Handler to the ropes. Handler rallied, however, near the close.

Round 4—They sparred for an opening, and Lavigne got in a body blow which sent Handler to the ropes. He followed it up with his right on the jaw. Handler appeared weak and Lavigne landed some heavy blows on the body, forcing his man to the ropes. Just as the gong sounded Lavigne got in his right and left on the head.

Round 5—The Kid got in his right on the body and immediately after landed his left. Handler was very groggy and Lavigne got in a heavy blow which knocked Handler down. The Newark boy got to his feet, but immediately afterward the Kid landed his right on the jaw and Handler was knocked down and out. One minute and seven seconds of the round had elapsed.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

CAPT. ASHE'S BOOK ON FREE COINAGE OF SILVER.

W. H. Henry's Farewell—A Fast Colt—Cotton Picking—Board of Public Charities—Inspection of State Farms—Secretary Coke Improving—The Arrington Investigation.

[Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, N. C., August 26.—Capt Ashe's book on the free coinage of silver is in the form of financial chats between several friends and is called "A Day with the Professor and His Friends." One of the characters is a college professor and there is a New York drummer who is a monometallist; another is a Kansas farmer who naturally is a Populist, while the chief talker is "The Major," a free coinage Democrat. The table of contents indicates that the ground on which the monometallists stand is not solid, that monometallism has proved a failure, and that free coinage of silver can be successfully maintained in the United States independently of European nations, if the administration be in earnest about it. Edwards & Broughton are now running the book through their presses and it will be out in ten days. There are about twenty illustrations. The price of the book will be twenty-five cents.

W. R. Henry's "farewell" remarks appear to-morrow. Compositors began to put it in type to-day and it is the rumor on the streets that the Caucasian has put in a large order for ice in the event of the type melting.

There is a horse in Raleigh, "St. Eolaus," who is entered for $60,000 worth of purses on the turf next year. The horse is a yearling and belongs to Mr. James Boylan. He is the strongest bred Leamington in the United States. He goes into training November the first. Last week, his uncle, Henry of Navarre, sold for $85,000. When the colt was first foaled, a New York gentleman offered $1,800 for him.

Cotton buyers here say that the first bale will not be brought to market until after September the first. If the weather remains good, picking will begin the latter part of the week.

On the sixth of September the Board of Public Charities will meet in this city in semi-annual session. Capt. C. B. Denson says that in reporting the condition of the institutions in the county, he will say that they are in better condition than they have ever been before.

The next examination for applicants to practice law will be held Monday, September 30th, in the Supreme Court building.

Governor Carr, Treasurer Worth, Auditor Furman and Mr. Young, of Cabarrus county, chairman of the Board of Directors, left to-day for the penitentiary farms in Halifax county. This is the annual time for inspection of the farms by the Governor and council. Mr. Young accompanied them in place of Mr. Leazer, who is detained at home.

Secretary Coke improved steadily last week, but to-day he had a slight setback. His condition was more hopeful yesterday.

The Governor has issued a requisition on the Governor of South Carolina for one Demps Grant, charged with burglarizing a residence. Grant stole a watch and $50 from a sleeping room. The crime was committed in Buncombe county. Grant is under arrest in Greenville, S. C.

Mr. W. J. Toomer, of Wilmington, has been appointed a notary public.

Governor Carr has issued a requisition on the Governor of Tennessee for Lee Bailey, an escaped convict.

A large party will attend the Newbern Fair from this city.

This piece of news will certainly affect the risibles of the public. The Tribunal of Talents, miscalled the Arrington Investigating Committee, will try and pull themselves together the latter part of the week. I have seen a letter from "Justice" Phillips stating that the Committee will try to meet. C. J. Campbell will turn up if he can get transportation. Little Billie Bryan is not stuck on coming. Strong pressure is being exerted to keep him away. Phillips and Campbell will be here if Treasurer Worth will pay them for their time, otherwise they may not. Mr. Worth tells me that he will honor no claims made by any of the committee.

Mr. T. R. Purnell, attorney for the committee, when asked about the approaching meeting said that it was one of the ethics of the profession not to tell their clients' business. The State will be informed of the movements of these most august personages.

The Mechanics' Dime Savings Bank will be opened November 1st for business. It will have as a feature the new system of lock boxes, which the depositors carry home with them.

[Special Star Telegram.]

Phillips, of Pitt, arrived to-night, Lord Chief Justice Campbell is expected to-morrow. It is not known whether Bryan is coming. Phillips says the committee will meet, regardless of Bryan's appearance.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Way Down in Dixie.

Yes, way down in the South,
Where the wild flowers bloom,
On the banks of the old Cape Fear.
You will find a well known and very popular firm,
Whose principles have ever been faithful and true.

For seven long years they've stood by the rack,
Standing ever ready their prices to whack;
With their prices whacked and chopped down,
Their large stock has increased, until they are compelled, for the want of room, to move up town.

We will on September 1st say adieu to the dear old stand as of yore, and will take up our headquarters in a better land for some time more at 115 North Front street. We expect to light and there stay for five long years with no trouble in sight. Let us say thank you to our dear patrons in the past and kindly ask you to go with us even to the last. In our new and handsome store, with stock greatly increased, with the aid of an elevator, so new and fine, to show you the three floors all at one time. It will place under your view goods of every clime, with prices to suit these hard times. With silks and satins and Dress Goods of all kinds, with Checks and Domestics to suit all minds.

We are on Front street opposite the Market House.

A War is Imminent in the South.

A Royal Feast the Bakers had,
And toasts were spoken faster, louder,
Till all by one consent hurrahed
For Dozier & Lee's Baking Powder.

"P. Cox" spread his spangled tail
"Good-luck" his horse-shoe hung on high,
"One Spoon" dipped in his little pail,
While "Sea-Foam's praise was sung too high,
Old "Horseford" trotted in his horse,
"Patapsco" tapped his big drum louder,
While "Royal" bad to bow, of course,
To Dozier & Lee's Baking Powder.

Sold at wholesale by Dozier & Lee, and by the retail trade generally. Weight one pound, and quality guaranteed, and a silver spoon given away with each box for 10 cents.

Hey diddle, diddle, the cat and the fiddle,
The cow jumped over the moon,
And while in the air, a notion quite queer,
Occurred to her cowship, and soon,
While she was descending, the eagle ascending,
His feathers a shining like silk,
She said Mr. Bird, who has ever heard
Of an eagle bird giving good milk?
Upon him she pounced, his eagleship flounced,
But she kicked the poor bird without mercy,
And made him admit that he hadn't the grit
To keep up a fight with the Jersey.

Jersey Milk beats Eagle Brand and is sold for just one half the price by Dozier & Lee. Try it and if not satisfied return it and get yonr money back. 10c per can. aug 18 tf
